

TRADING 4'S WITH A MENTOR!

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #165

If you've watched more than three Digging Deeper Jazz videos, you likely have a problem. Have you spent more than five hours this month playing about jazz? Do you take online music classes, or have you had a lesson this year? If so, you have a serious jazz problem!

If you are truly interested in learning heart surgery, watching videos and reading books is not going to get you well prepared. You are kidding yourself, and I don't want you operating on me. Hands on training, baby! And, if you are going to invest a bunch of time in jazz, why not REALLY invest? Otherwise, you are operating at 10% of what you could be achieving. 10% is not interesting, and it's definitely not fun to listen to. Work with a mentor who you know and trust, and then hold on to your seat. That other 90% will be yours for the taking.

Bb Blues Form

A Few Approaches To Trading Fours

- 1) Can you imitate something that you just heard from the soloist before you?
A melody, or a rhythm? Something stylistic, or even just a "vibe"?
- 2) Can you answer the soloist? Don't simply copy them, but truly answer them?
What is a good response to what they just played?
- 3) Can you say something new, fantastic, out of the blue? Can you create a new topic of discussion? Be an instigator!
