

FAST & FLASHY

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #176

For many of us, the advice "don't trust your ears" can be pretty good advice. It is easy to conflate amazing emotion, or playing high, or playing fast with "complicated" or "difficult to understand." Here is Exhibit "A" from Jeff's personal files of "stuff that I thought was hard, and used to really freak me out." A portion of Lee Morgan's trumpet solo off the song "Locomotion," from the John Coltrane album Blue Trane.

#1 - Lee Morgan, 2nd chorus of Locomotion

Once we can LEARN and SEE what's going on, for many of us, we can then HEAR what's going on. You may wish that your ears were perfect, but they probably are not. Don't feel like you need to apologize for depending on and using your knowledge, or intellect, or sense of history. Whatever gets you there is fair play. Your eyes and your brain can help you develop your ears.

#2 - Generalizing the concept

