

EPISODIC SOLOING!

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #183

We'll all heard the good advice about connecting our solo ideas, and playing motivically. We've learned about voice leading, and been coached to not let our solos meander around. We know we should have a musical goal, and a climax, and deep meaning, and nice direction to our lines. Holy crap!! Who has the foresight and brain power for all of this, anyway?

While this is all good advice, it can also be paralyzing. It turns out that playing one or two measures at a time (episodically), can work great. Base your playing on strong bits of jazz vocabulary, and you'll soon be ready to get fancier with voice leading and everything else.

#1 - Monk

