

PERFECTION IS NOT GOOD!

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #186

Let's be clear - perfection is not at all the goal. There is not one person reading this page, or listening to this Digging Deeper Jazz video that needs to think about getting things perfect. "Good enough" is where it's at. Maybe you've heard the sayings "perfect is the enemy of good," or "perfect is the enemy of done." Both are exactly right. Go for good, and strive for done. But . . . when are we done, and what is good enough?

Organize your practice into WHAT's, and HOW's. Understand the difference, and which you are working on at any given time.

WHAT = notes, the song you are playing, rhythms, even tempo, chord changes, etc.

HOW = how fast, even volume, great tone, articulation, accuracy, control, etc.

How do you know when you are done? If you can do it three times in a row, you are done.

#1 - Articulation (Mr. PC)

#2 - Tempo/Flow (bebop lick)

#3a - Technical Issues (Suspense)

#3b - Technical Issues (Suspense)
