

BOUNCE LIKE FREDDIE!

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #132

When we think about Freddie Hubbard (or Cannonball Adderly, or Ella Fitzgerald, or Jaco Pastorius) we think about their Feel. We love WHAT they played and sang of course, but perhaps we love HOW they did what they did even more. Freddie (and Cannonball, Ella and Jaco) all had a bounce to their style: a happiness, a joy, a drive. What's that all about, and do you have to be "born with it?"

That "bounce" comes from HOW those legends sang and played, not so much from WHAT they sang and played. That is the first important lesson. And the second important lesson? The HOW part of their style gets down to Articulation. How they began notes, now they ended notes, and now much space was between the notes. This involved a lot of technique on our instrument, but this is time incredibly well spent. Let's dig in to a few ideas.

#1 - Work on playing Legato, mm = 60

#2 - Work on playing Marcato, mm = 60

#3 - Work on playing Legato Accents, mm = 60

#4 - Freddie Hubbard (A Child Is Born, "Mel Lewis & Friends," 1:12)
