

BUILD YOUR OWN LICKS (#1)

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #148

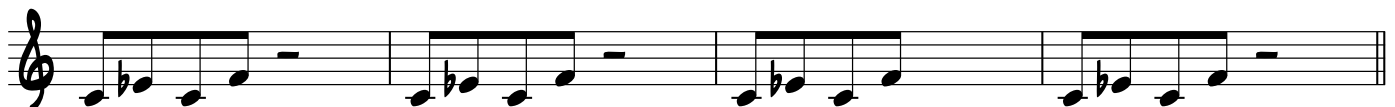

"Mommy, daddy . . . where do licks come from?" Well, they don't grow on trees, Billy. They mostly are stolen and tweaked and morphed from other preexisting material. They were someone else's lick first, and they got recast as something different and new one day.

It might just be time to begin building YOUR own licks. Begin with someone else's good idea, and mess with it some. Stretch it out, or leave part of it off. Change the rhythm or put it in a new key. Either way what you end up with is new, and it's yours. Begin doing some jazz-Frankenstein-like experiments, and just see what you get. Not every new "jazz monster" is a winner, but you don't know until you give it a try. Go build a monster.

#1 - A Love Supreme (John Coltrane)

#2 - Rhythmic Displacement & Diminution

#3 - Rhythmic Displacement, Diminution and Transposition

#4 - Augmentation & Transposition

