

THE WORLD'S SHORTEST LICK

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #83

Long, complicated four or eight measure long licks are fun and insightful, but there are also hard to learn, hard to remember, and hard to maneuver and manipulate. They kind of "are what they are." Take it or leave it.

The shorter the lick, the faster it is to learn, the faster it is to remember. But this isn't just about getting out of hard work. These short licks have the HUGE benefit of being easy to manipulate, easy to tweak, easy to personalize and easy to develop. Fences and buildings are traditionally made out of small bricks for a reason. You can do anything with them. With bricks that are two meters long, good luck building a smooth arch, or a five foot long wall. Shorter can definitely be better, in bricks and in jazz improvisation.

Target Note, Down a Half Step, Target Note

C Dorian Scale in Thirds, with "Lower Neighbor"

