

CRY ME A RIVER!

FROM DIGGING DEEPER VIDEO #95

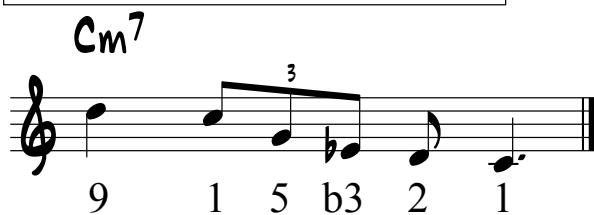

The "Cry Me A River Lick" might be the most played melodic line in the history of jazz. It's certainly in the Top 10. This lick almost certainly began as a melodic quote of the song "Cry Me A River," and somehow fell into popular use by jazz musicians.

There are quite a few different melodic versions of it, and the lick has actually been morphed to fit over many different chord qualities, most notably over altered dominant chords (#4 and #5 below). In all these different versions, a few things are always constant - the shape is always "descending," and the lick always has six notes.

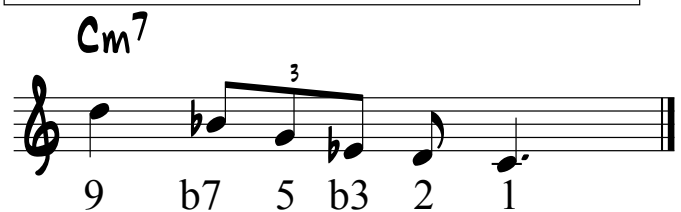

#1 - Opening melody of the song "Cry Me A River"

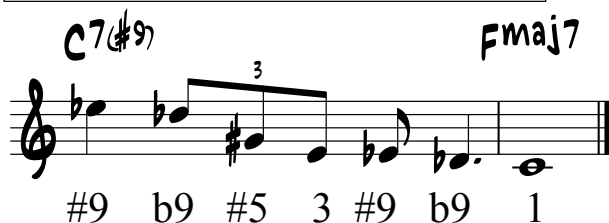

#2 - A typical "jazz" version

#3 - A MORE typical "jazz" version

#4 - Altered Dominant version

#5 - It's the original melody, in Db minor
